Wise Scotch Laddie.

A Scotch lad had his leg injured at a factory, and was treated for some time by the doctor without much favorable result. His mother had great faith in a local bone-setter, and wanted her son to go to him; but the boy, objecting, preferring, as he said, the "regular faculty." Finally, however, he yielded to his mother's persuasions, and was taken to the town where the famous bone-setter resided. The leg was duly examined, and it was found necessary to pull it very severely, in order "to get the bone in," as the quack expressed it. The patient howled in agony, but at last the bone was "got in," and he was bidden to go home. In a few days he would be all right, and could resume work. "Didn't he do it well?" said the joyous old lady, as they started homeward. "Yes, he did, mother," said the lad; "he pulled it well; but I was as sick as a fool as to give him the salt leg!"

Bad State of Mind.

Peevishness induced in two officers, brings on a sort of permanent "grouch." If we allow ourselves to get irritated and disagreeable over trifling matters, pretty soon every thing that doesn't go just our way will be regarded as a particular slam of fate, and we will get the fixed idea that life is treating us very badly indeed.

Best to Avoid "Scenes."

A clever woman never makes a scene. It isn't polite. A scene that lasts an hour works 14 days' detriment to her appearance.--Elsie Lindner.

Thunder, Perhaps.

A childless couple, having concluded the house was too quiet, bethought them of adopting a child. So they proceeded to a nice respectable orphan asylum to see what there was in stock. "We want a boy to raise," the husband said to the superintendent when that gentleman appeared. "To raise what?" he inquired, with a peculiar gleam in his eyes, as a terrific racket resounded through the upper halls. The husband and wife looked at each other for a moment. "I guess we don't want a boy today," remarked the lady, and they said "good-bye" hastily.
